Hafiz Naeem accuses PPP of dividing Sindh on ethnic lines

By Our Staff Correspondent

HYDERABAD: Emir Jamaat-i-Islami (JI) Hafiz Naeemur Rehman has said that the PPP has divided Sindh on ethnic and nationalist lines while ruling the province for years as what he termed the "A-team of the establishment".

He was speaking at an annual gathering of khatam-i-Bukhari in Jamia Uloom Islamia, Mansoorah, Matiari, on Sunday. He said that the US was biggest "taghut" (oppressive power) in the world today, saying that global imperial forces were involved in the genocide of Muslims. He criticised US President Donald Trump for issuing threats of military attacks and "speaking in a god-like tone".

He said the PPP has been enjoying a free hand in Sindh for nearly 17 years, yet millions of children remained out of school and basic rights such as health, education, employment, and justice were denied to people. "A single family has ruled Sindh for decades but 7.8m children were still not attending schools. Despite receiving trillions of rupees from federal government, development existed only on paper," he regretted.

Hafiz Naeem said the JI would not abandon the people of Sindh and continue its struggle to free them from injustice and exploitation. He announced that under the leadership of Sindh emir Kashif Saeed Sheikh, the JI would take public issues directly to the masses and hold rulers accountable.

US-Isreali aggression in Gaza

Referring to global affairs, he said that thousands of children had been killed and millions of homes destroyed in Gaza under Israeli premier Benjamin Netanyahu, saying that Trump had acted as his patron. He chided Western powers for selectively championing human rights only when it suited their interests, citing recent protests against inflation in Iran as an example.

The JI emir stressed that Gen Z included not only school-going children, but students of religious seminaries, children of farmers, labourers and brick-kiln workers.

Those who attended the ceremony included Sindh emir Kashif Saeed Sheikh, Jamia administrator Maulana Ahsan Bhutto, provincial deputy emirs Nizamuddin Memon and Hafiz Nasrullah Channa, general secretary Mohammad Yousaf and district emir Faqir Mohammad Mansori.

Two minors die as roof collapses in Nawabshah

By Our Correspondent

NAWABSHAH: A man lost his two sons when the roof of his home collapsed in the Golimar area of Nawabshah on Sunday.

He and his two other family members were injured in the incident.

The deceased boys were identified as Ahmed, 5, and Imad, 4. They, along with their father, Zahid, and other family members, Shabana and Anabia, were trapped under the debris.

Residents of the neighbourhood and Rescue-1122 personnel took out the victims from under the rubble and transported them to the Peoples Medical University Hospital, Nawabshah.

'Bhitai's heroines' extensively discussed at Larkana Arts Council programme

By M.B. Kalhoro

LARKANA: Larkana Arts Council's literature section commemorated the birth anniversary of the great Sufi saint Shah Abdul Latif Bhitai by organising an event in the Bhitai Literary Hall on Saturday night.

The event featured a distinguished programme titled 'Shah's heroines', to shed light on the characters of valiant women of Sindh. A Question & Answer session offered profound insights into Bhitai's immortal characters, the heroines.

The programme brought together a galaxy of scholars who discussed the heroines. Abro Sameena spoke on Sohni, Fahmida Abro on Noori, Rubina Abro on Moomal, Ayesha Sario on Marvi, Rafia Bukhari on Soorath, Amina Shahani Darshwar on Sassui, and Pirh Sakeena Gad spoke on Leela.

Faqeer Ayoub Gaad Latifi, Ambreen Fatima and Rabab Fatima graced the stage, where they recited verses of Bhitai in the traditional Jhongari style, garnering tremendous appreciation.

Following the recital, all seven heroines of Bhitai were presented on the screen, which the audience applauded enthusiastically and looked thoroughly captivated.

Abro Sameena told the audience that Sohni in Bhitai's kalam was the 'goddess of love' who, even while breaking earthen pots, never wavered, but sacrificed her very life to make her love immortal. Bhitai's message woven through this is that Sohni represents an exemplary character of struggle and separation from society, from which countless lessons may be gleaned.

Fahmida Abro said Noori in Bhitai's verses possessed physical beauty, yet in nature, she embodied a character of tenderness and modesty for her beloved. Thus it may be said that among men, Noori is a powerful and beautiful woman. Bhitai's verses convey a complete message that humanity is everything, she said.

Rubina Abro discussed Moomal in a refreshingly novel manner and paid tribute to Bhitai, saying: "Though I dwelt in palaces, I cherished natural beauty, for nature is the true message of love, which Shah Sahib has presented in the Moomal verse, illuminating the message of truth".

Ayesha Sario, explicating Marvi, noted that Marvi, in her homeland's garment, carries such a message that even when tempted by greed, she continued to long for her simple hut and loved ones. "In this Marvi verse, Shah Sahib vividly presents the love for the homeland, awakening the consciousness of the nation's people.

Rafia Bukhari, discussing Sorath, remarked that among all heroines of Bhitai, Soorath's character is unique — a character of supreme sacrifice that shines forth. This verse teaches the lesson that a promise made must be a promise kept.

Amina Shahani Darshwar spoke extensively on Sassui, stating that Bhitai is such a sovereign of Sufism who possesses the paths of Shariah, Tareeqat and spiritual guidance — though traversing all these is no easy feat but fraught with great difficulty.

The significant point is that in the Sassui verses, Shah Sahib has composed numerous verses wherein his primary message is found in Sassui's trials and tribulations. If one seeks to understand Sufism, the Sassui verses may be considered exemplary, for the intricacies of Sufism are discovered in her pedestrian journey, and in this verse, Shah Sahib's message is one of determination and steadfastness.

Parh Sakeena Gad, speaking on Leela, noted that although Leela initially succumbed to the temptation of jewelry and made a bargain, she later came to regret it and, in search of her lost love, continued striving under any circumstances, employing every stratagem. This verse too reveals the vice of greed and avarice.

The programme was graced by a big number of women, besides others who participated and drew lessons from Bhitai's heroines.

Ecological crisis unfolding in deltaic region, warns scholar

Vanishing Indus and its impact on Sindh's heritage and environment discussed at Besant Hall programme

By Our Staff Correspondent

HYDERABAD: Historians, researchers and other scholars discussed 'Vanishing Indus and its impact on environment and heritage of Sindh' at a programme held in Besant Hall on Saturday evening.

They observed that the ancient mighty river is gradually disappearing and this is going to have far-reaching consequences for Sindh's ecology, environment, heritage, history and collective memory.

Scholar Dr Mohammad Ali Manjhi referred to Shah Abdul Latif Bhitai's poetry to highlight cultural centrality of the Indus. Through carefully chosen couplets, he narrated how the river has shaped Sindh's social rhythms, moral image and spiritual worldview, serving not merely as a water source, but also as a living symbol of continuity, sustenance and belonging.

Maritime environmental researcher Amer Bazl Khan spoke on the ecological crisis unfolding in the Indus Delta. He spoke of a drastic reduction in freshwater flows, resulting in seawater intrusion; degradation of mangrove forests; and erosion of coastal livelihoods. He highlighted the human cost of ecological neglect in the region, where fishing communities and deltaic ecosystems stand on the brink of irreversible loss.

Renowned historian and traveller Salman Rashid reflected on the Indus as an ancient corridor of movement, trade and cultural exchange. He drew people's attention to the abandoned river courses and forgotten settlements scattered across Sindh's landscape, describing them as silent testimonies to the magnitude of loss brought about by the river's retreat.

For him, the drying Indus is not only an environmental tragedy, but a 'historical amputation'.

A visual anthropologist, Atta Chaniho, traced deep historical roots of Indus, drawing connections between the Indus and Sarasvati civilisations.

Referring to the river's ancient course, Dhoro Naro, he illustrated how shifting and drying river systems reshaped human settlements, compelled migrations and altered entire cultural landscapes. His presentation underscored how environmental change has historically dictated the rise and decline of civilisations in the region.

Concluding the session, Director of the Besant Hall Cultural Centre, Sobhia Ali, said that the objective of the discussion was to encourage actions towards reconnecting people with the Indus as a 'living heritage' rather than a distant relic.

She stressed that the Indus river's disappearance threatens both environmental balance and cultural identity. She called for renewed awareness, collective responsibility and ethical stewardship.

The discussion closed with a shared resolve that saving the Indus was not merely an ecological necessity, but a cultural imperative — one that demands remembrance, action and a renewed relationship with the river that has shaped Sindh's soul for millennia.

Earlier, the session opened on a note with a group of folk singers rendering selected excerpts from sur samundi of Shah Abdul Latif Bhitai, invoking the Indus as both a physical entity and a spiritual metaphor. Their performance recalled Sindh's ancient riverine consciousness, where water, land and human life have long been interwoven in poetry and belief, according to the organisers of the event.

Palijo tells poor segments to stand up against oppressors

By Our Correspondent

BADIN: Qaumi Awami Tehreek (QAT) chief Ayaz Latif Palijo has said that it is unfortunate that the people of Sindh, especially farmers, peasants and labourers, are living in abject poverty despite the fact that the province is rich in natural resources.

He was addressing the Sindh Hari Tehreek (SHT) workers' convention, held in memory of peasant leader Fazil Rahu, in Kario Ghanwar town of Badin district on Sunday.

Palijo said that Sindh has a vast coastline, oil & gas reserves and also fertile land and minerals, but its people are living in abject poverty due to flawed policies of the ruling Pakistan Peoples Party.

He said that the real power lies with peasants, workers and the oppressed masses who must not silently wait for their fate, but rise against the oppressive forces. "Our silence will only strengthen the corrupt," he remarked, and asked all the poor living in Sindh to actively resist injustices being done to them.

He said Shaheed Fazil Rahu was a symbol of resistance, who waged a long struggle for the rights of Sindh and its people, besides for the cause of democracy. Palijo said his party was continuing to follow Fazil Rahu's path by struggling against theft of Sindh's water, grabbing of its lands and exploitation of its people. He observed that while Punjab and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa were in a competition of development and governance, "Sindh stands trapped in corruption, kidnappings, robberies and institutional collapse".

JSM-R leader briefs SANA chief on 'injustices to Sindh by Centre'

By Our Staff Corrrespondent

HYDERABAD: Observing that Sindh has been facing tyranny since the inception of Pakistan, Jeay Sindh Mahaz-Riaz (JSM-R) Chairman Riaz Ali Chandio has alleged that civilian governments are also product of military regimes.

He was speaking at a reception hosted by him for Dr Maqbool Halepoto, President of the Sindhi Association of North America (SANA), at his residence here on Sunday. Leaders of different nationalist parties also attended it.

Mr Chandio said that whenever the Constitution was amended, the rights of smaller nations, particularly those belonged to Sindh, were trampled over. He said that lawlessness ruled the country.

He said police were involved in extrajudicial killings while people were rendered physically incapacitated. He said Pakistan never experienced the real democracy; there was no rule of law or the Constitution. He said that when anti-canal movement was underway, [blasphemy suspect] Dr Shahnawaz Kumbhar was killed to sabotage the struggle and push Sindh into religious extremism.

He said that now Sindh's geographical integrity was threatened and its resources were under attack as well. He said the fundamental human rights remained suspended. He said the people of Sindh were facing oppression.

He said on the one hand Altaf Hussain said Sindh was home of Urdu-speaking community, which was a message of unity, but on the other, he alleged, Federal Minister Mustafa Kamal was being used to fan ethnic riots under a conspiracy. Simultaneously, he said, some elements whose past was riddled with terrorism also got engaged in attack on Sindh and G.M. Syed when Sindh's division was talked about in Islamabad. He said SANA worked as a source of courage for the JSM-R.

Dr Maqbool Halepoto said that SANA was doing everything possible for Sindh at its level. He said the organisation was founded by 13 persons 41 years ago.
